

11th Annual Center for Circadian Biology Symposium

February 9-11, 2021

UC San Diego

An exciting event and opportunity

We invite you to sponsor and participate in the UC San Diego Center for Circadian Biology (CCB) 11th Annual Circadian Biology Symposium, to be held virtually on February 9-11, 2021. The meeting brings together the world's top researchers from around the world, including participation from more than 50 local labs that are part of our center. The symposium features an unparalleled breadth and depth of leading-edge research and groundbreaking biological timing discoveries in plants, animals and humans, and spans molecular biology to clinical applications. By sponsoring, you will join the Who's Who in circadian and sleep research in this exciting venture and help us invent the future.

The mission of the Center for Circadian Biology is to advance leading-edge research in circadian biology that will have dramatic and lasting impacts on improving human health, the environment and the economy. Our aim is to establish UC San Diego and Torrey Pines Mesa as the premier international center of academic excellence in circadian research.
